DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claim 1 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Khan.

Khan discloses a method of generating pulse width modulated (PWM) signals including constructing a lookup table for Pulse Width Modulation values in which modulation indices are used to generate an ordered list of the length duration of the high and low pulse width values. Because the duty cycles are created in order, there is no need for the cycles to be ordered in the table generation (2. PWM Technique, 3. Look-Up-Tables Construction Technique, p. 1). The PWM waveform generation occurs when a comparator compares the modulation index values (which are directly correlated to the duty cycle) and a counter. An interrupt is used to create the waveforms because the waveform creation is disclosed as an interrupt subroutine (5. System Software and Operation). The modulation index value is used to retrieve the high and low pulse duration to create the desired waveform (5.1 Waveform Generation). After the creation of the waveform creation the table pointer is incremented and when the counter is overflowed (reaches the maximum value) the pointer is reset to zero (5. System Software and Operation)

Claim 5, inherits the limitation of Claim 1. As the sorting of the duty cycles is done in the creation of the duty cycle tables, it can be said that this operation takes place as a background operation.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

3. The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

4. Claim 7 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

Claim 7, the recitation beginning on line 7, "a capture and compare module in communication with said microprocessor" is unclear in meaning is rendered vague and indefinite. It is not clear from the claim what is being captured, or what is being compared in this module.

Art Unit: 2634

5. Claims 2-4, 6, 8, 9 are objected to as dependent upon rejected Claims, however, would be allowable if rewritten in independent form.
